TAUGHT THEM THE LAW

JUDGE WHOMES GIVES SUSPENDED SENTENCE TO GARBAGE ORDINANCE BREAKERS

There appeared before Judge J. Whomes, yesterday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, Mrs. E. Connors and Mrs. H. Howell, charged with a misdemeanor in so far as they had wilfully permitted an accumulation of garbage in an open wooden box. Judge Whomes asked the ladies to plead in answer to this indictment. Both plead, "Not guilty."

Judge Whomes explained to them that the ordinance provides that all garbage must be kept in watertight galvanized receptacles, with close-fitting metal covers and that these covers must be kept on until the garbage is removed.

George H. Herald, chief of police testified that he had made careful examination of the conditions prevailing in the part of the alley where the wooden garbage boxes stood. The boxes were foul, swarming with flies and diffusing a most disagreeable and unhealthy odor. The accumulation of garbage, he said, was considerable.

Asked what they had to say to this, one of the accused, Mrs. Connors, replied, "Is it not the custom in Glendale for the owners of property to provide garbage cans? We are only in Glendale for a short time. I have nothing in the way of household furniture except a trunk. You can't expect me to carry a garbage can in my trunk. I spoke to the landlord about this matter. I think it is he who should be compelled to provide a can."

Judge Whomes said that the city had nothing to do with the owner. "If you rent property in this city," he explained, "it is your duty to see that the garbage is attended to."

Dr. Chase, health officer, testified that he had examined the premises in question and that the conditions there were in violation of the ordinance.

Officer E. A. Lawrence testified that he found an accumulation of garbage in the alley at 425 Cedar street and had ordered the accused to see that it was removed and that a suitable garbage can was provided. He explained to them most particularly that they must have a can in order to comply with the ordinance.

Judge Whomes: "You ladies have violated the ordinance. You evidently thought the officer was not in earnest and that you could defy the city."

Mrs. Connors: "You are entirely mistaken about that."

Judge Whomes: Under the circumstances I can do nothing but enforce the law. The ordinance says most plainly that every householder must provide a garbage can. You have not complied with the requirement and even after you had been warned you continued the offense. Considering everything I cannot do otherwise than find you guilty. The ordinance provides for an offense of this nature a fine not exceeding $100 or ten days in jail or both. What have you to say before sentence is passed?

The ladies answered that they had put the matter before their landlord and that he had promised to provide a garbage can but that it had not been provided before their arrest.

Judge Whomes: "You know that whether you live in Los Angeles or Glendale you must comply with the laws of the place where you live. You cannot break the law in Glendale simply because it is a small city. I will be lenient with you. I sentence you each to pay a fine of $5 but I will suspend this sentence for three days to give you an opportunity to comply with the ordinance. If that is not done I will renew the fine and add five days in the city jail."

It is needless to say that the ladies appeared to have acquired a wider knowledge of law when they departed than when they first appeared in court.

PATRONS' DAY EXHIBIT

THIRD STREET INTERMEDIATE SCHOOL INVITES PUBLIC TO SEE WORK

After many months of careful and conscientious preparation and study, the teachers and scholars of the Intermediate school on Third street will give parents and others interested in the work of the school practical demonstration of the work that has been accomplished. The school will be open to the public tomorrow, Friday, May 21, for inspection of the exhibits of the various departments from 3 to 10 p. m.

It is expected that there will be a very large attendance of the public as every effort has been made to have a most complete and interesting exhibition. All departments of the school will be represented and it is only just to say that the work that will be shown reflects great credit on teachers and pupils alike.

There will be a very complete exhibit of work from the manual training department. This exhibit will consist of articles of furniture made by the boys of this department; parts of house construction and woodwork of all kinds.

The sewing exhibit, which is under the supervision of Miss Woodbridge, will be as complete as such exhibits can be made. The children have been trained in making aprons, large and small; dresses, that is to say, simple cotton and linen dresses for children; bloomers for athletic work, specimens of sock darning and all the usual garments within the scope of children. Much of the work is highly creditable to the department.

In addition to taking charge of the sewing, Miss Woodbridge also teaches the cooking department. This section of the school work is well organized and does much practical work.

A large number of gas cooking stoves is available and there is ample room for the children to practice this most useful accomplishment.

The children will have on exhibit cakes of various kinds; ginger bread, sponge cake, pies of all kinds, fruit cookies, muffins, puddings, desserts of all kinds, angel cake, soda biscuits, baked apples, salad, meat balls and potatoes.

Throughout the session the children have served lunches for fifteen cents and breakfasts ranging in price from four cents to ten cents. These lunches and breakfasts have given satisfaction.

Miss White, who is in charge of the agricultural exhibit and also assists with the sewing, has made a great success of her work. Her children take an intelligent interest in the practical work of gardening, which they pursue at home. They write papers on the subjects they study. They collect and classify the wild flowers which grow in such abundance and variety in Glendale. Then they do some biological work, learning the use of the microscope and studying the different parts of the flowers and plants to advantage in this manner. They are also taught the use and value of fertilizer and shown the effects of different fertilizers on different soils. They study analysis of soil in so far as that can be pursued in school, and are shown by practical demonstration the difference between Glendale soil and that of neighboring sections. This is of course elementary work, but it is a beginning and prepares the pupil for taking up those subjects in an advanced way.

The children of this section are anxious to let the public know that they have an interesting exhibit in the shape of a four-legged chicken. This natural freak was hatched recently, but only survived the hardships of this unsympathetic world three days. The defunct many-limbed feathered biped is now reposing in royal state in a jar of alcohol and is receiving more attention in its present condition than it would ever have received in life.

On the whole, this Intermediate school exhibit promises to be one of the most interesting ever given in Glendale. In addition to the regular exhibits, a program will be given in the evening at 8 o'clock, when the music and physical culture departments will show the results of their careful training. Songs, choruses, dance songs, dumb bell drills and Indian club work will make up an excellent evening's entertainment.

GOOD NEWS FOR G. U. H. S.

After much correspondence and some trouble, it has been definitely ascertained that any girl graduate of the Glendale high school is eligible for entrance to Wellesley college without examination. This is quite a credit to the school and shows its high standing. There are many eastern schools that are not eligible for admission to Wellesley.

WHERE WAR'S HATREDS VANISH

From a French soldier's letter in the New York Call—There are two other men lying near me, and I do not think there is much hope for them either. One is an officer of a Scottish regiment and the other is a private in the Uhlans. They were struck down after me, and when I came to myself, I found them bending over me rendering first aid.

The Britisher was pouring water down my throat from his flask, and the German was endeavoring to staunch my wound with an antiseptic preparation served out to them by their medical corps. The Highlander had one of his legs shattered, and the German had several pieces of shrapnel buried in his side.

In spite of their own sufferings they were trying to help me and when I was fully conscious again the German gave us a morphia injection and took one himself. His medical corps had also provided him with the injection and the needle, together with printed instructions for its use.

After the injection feeling wonderfully at ease, we spoke of the lives we had lived before the war. We all spoke English and we all spoke of the women we had left at home. Both the German and the Britisher had been married only a year.

I wondered and I suppose the others did, why we had fought one another at all. I looked at the Highlander who was falling asleep, exhausted and in spite of his drawn face and his mud stained uniform, he looked the embodiment of freedom. Then I thought of the tri-color of France and all that France had done for liberty. Then I watched the German who had ceased to speak. He had taken a prayer book from his knapsack and was trying to read the service for soldiers wounded in battle.

The above picture forcibly brings to one's consciousness the enormity of the crime resting on the lords and rulers of the nations, who are responsible for the present slaughter. The common people who are fighting and dying are brothers and not enemies. No war should be declared without a vote of all the people. That would make war next to impossible.

R. Gilhausen.

NOT WELL INFORMED

CITY CLERK J. C. SHERER EXPLAINS CERTAIN PHASES OF MERCHANTS TAX LAW

Editor News:

Referring to the communication in your issue yesterday from Mr. O. L. Kilborn in reference to license ordinance No. 263, Mr. Kilborn evidently overlooks section 45 which imposes a fee of $5 per month for "peddling goods, wares, merchandise, meat, fish, bread, pastry, pickles, fruit or vegetables." This is designed to protect the home merchant, and will no doubt do so to some extent; whether the fee should be more or less is of course a matter of opinion. At this point, Mr. Kilborn naturally inquires, "Why, then is the law not enforced?" The ordinance has not yet been in existence a month and over 150 individuals and concerns have paid their licenses at the city clerk's office without the services of an outside collector having been required, which is a very fair showing for a beginning. The police department has brought in a number of peddlers, solicitors and agents from time to time, and that department will probably be more active in that direction after the end of the first experimental month. The city trustees have not thought best as yet to employ the services of a special license collector, considering it best at the beginning to see how the ordinance would work out automatically, and the result has been fully as satisfactory as could be expected. A number of the peddlers now at work possess licenses granted under the old ordinance, some of them not expiring for three or four months yet. Those of them who are operating without a license will be brought in ultimately if they continue to do business, and in the meantime are taking serious chances of having a round with Judge Whomes.

Meantime, Mr. Kilborn and other good citizens will be performing a public duty if they report to the police department, Sunset 31, or to this office any case which needs attention.

J. C. SHERER, City Clerk.

RECIPE SHOWER

Charming in its simplicity was the Recipe shower party given Saturday afternoon in honor of the brides-elect Miss Elizabeth Lang and Miss Eva Black by the Misses Read of North Central avenue. The rooms were prettily decorated with pink roses and carnations. As the guests arrived they were invited to the breakfast room where they wrote their favorite recipes. Each recipe was enclosed in an envelope and addressed to the bride.

After an interesting game of cards, a delicious repast was served. The floral decorations of the bride's table was a basket of pink carnations tied with a dainty bow of tulle.

At the close of the luncheon when the prizes were awarded to the winners, Misses Harriett Wells, Martha Porter and Elizabeth Porter, the merry discourse was interrupted by the arrival of the mail man who was no other than "Decon" the beautiful Scotch collie dog, pet of the household, with a mail bag strapped to his back in which was enclosed the mail for the brides consisting of card catalogue cabinets and a goodly number of recipes to fill them.

AT THE SANITARIUM

Music reigned supreme the other night at the Glendale sanitarium. There was a large attendance of guests and others in the parlors to hear the excellent program presented by Mr. Saunders, violinist, and Mrs. Bachman, pianist.

Those resident in the sanitarium had also the privilege of enjoying another musical treat in the church. This was given by Prof. G. B. Miller, organist, and Miss Susine Wessels, both of Glendale. The Glendale male quartet also rendered two numbers.

SANITARIUM VISITORS

The following are recent arrivals at the Glendale sanitarium: Mr. and Mrs. F. L. McCormick, San Francisco; C. F. Goodwin, Grand Forks, N. D.; Mrs. C. N. Leebick, Long Beach; Mrs. O. M. Kellogg, Santa Barbara; Mrs. H. E. Tallant, San Fernando; W. O. Eddy, San Francisco.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC

Messrs. J. C. Sherer, Geo. T. Paine and A. M. Brooks have been appointed by the Chamber of Commerce to get out a booklet advertising Glendale. If you have a good suggestion, call up one of this committee and let them have it. Perhaps they can use it to advantage.

WALK TO SAN DIEGO

A SAN FRANCISCO BOYS' CLUB SENDS FIFTY ON FOOT TO SOUTHERN EXPOSITION

SAN DIEGO, May 19.—Over El Camino Real, the King's Highway, which was started nearly a century and a half ago by the Franciscan friars as the link between the old mission of San Diego de Alcalá and the line of sanctuaries to the north, will move next month a new pilgrimage, this made up of fifty boys on their first visit to the San Diego exposition.

They are members of the seventeenth annual walking club of the Columbia Park Boys' club of San Francisco, commanded by Major Sidney S. Peixotto, widely known for his work in behalf of boys. More than 6000 boys have grown up in his scheme of athletic and social education.

The party includes a band of forty pieces. The other ten youngsters are singers and dancers, and all fifty are used in the athletic programs to be given in thirty cities and towns the club will pass through on the pilgrimage to San Diego. The tour starts on June 4 and on July 26, Sunday, will end at San Diego, where a big reception will be staged by the exposition.

Two years ago Major Peixotto conducted his famous world tour with forty-seven boys, some of whom are in the San Diego party.

UTILIZING WASTE LAND

No one can help being struck with the quantity of waste land in Glendale. It meets the eye everywhere. On the side streets and intersections of the main streets of the city large lots are bringing forth abundantly—sow-thistle, mullein, sun cups, jimson weed, wild convolvulus and a thousand other flowers and shrubs. "Ill weeds grow apace." The old proverb holds true to the present hour. Lift up your eyes and behold the hillsides covered with the lavish gold of the wild mustard; see how it gives its color to the scene! How much more profitable and how equally beautiful would be fields of waving corn or the seven-fold alfalfa! How much better a field of potatoes cultivated in odd hours by some of our families that have been feeling the pinch of hard times!

In China you would never see such sights as Glendale presents on every hand. Among those clever Orientals, a nation which we affect to despise, every foot of ground is under cultivation. Strips of roadside soil that in the United States lie untouched by plough, spade, hoe or cultivator, are subjected to intense cultivation and support one or two families. In Japan similar conditions prevail. Everything is cultivated. In Scotland, one of the bleakest and most forbidding climates in the world, the native industry and perseverance of the people have turned in the course of centuries what was forbidding bog land into garden soil. There in spite of spring seasons when cold rain drives down in sheets and the cold soil is but a poor nurse for crops invincible courage and unrelenting toil and perseverance compel crops to grow.

In those lands you never see a snake fence; every field is shut in trimly and every border is bearing something. Even in the cities and small towns the garden lots are utilized in every possible way and a succession of crops is obtained from land that we might not consider sufficient to support one small rabbit.

Yet, even here in Glendale there are men and women who are making not only a comfortable living, but even laying by money from the proceeds of one acre of ground. Would it not be possible for the owners of waste land in the shape of city lots to offer the use of such land free of charge or for a nominal rent to families who are willing to undertake their cultivation?

Much of the sordid poverty that afflicts some American families that were formerly self-supporting and independent might thus be avoided or relieved. There are many families that would welcome the use of a vacant lot and would willingly bestow on it the labor necessary to make it a thing of beauty to the city and a source of profit to themselves.

Surely there is nothing more unlike common sense than to have so many lots lying vacant when there are men and women and children willing to bestow on them the cultivation that would redeem them from the category of "waste land." Why should there be anything "waste" in a community like Glendale and in an age like the twentieth century?

This is work for the city as a city to attend to. There are even now property owners who have had foresight enough to know that it improves the selling chances of a piece of vacant land to have it under cultivation; and who with that end in view have given the use of their vacant lands to others on condition that they clean them of weeds and stumps and other incumbrances and put them in crops. You will see some fine fields of Kaffir corn and of potatoes along the Verdugo end of Third street, and other streets also, where land a short time ago overrun with untended vines has been made to produce profitably under such conditions.

There should be more of this in Glendale. There are plenty of people who would be willing to cultivate crops on those terms. Think of what a boon it would be to a poor family just at present to have a fine crop of new potatoes at no other cost than the seed and the labor, especially when new potatoes cost five cents a pound. It might be necessary to lend some of those people the tools for cultivation and even to give them credit for the seed, but the crops would enable them to pay back what might be advanced and great would be the profit for the beneficiary and also for the benefactor.

BRITISH CABINET CRISIS

He was a wise man who first said "It's bad policy to swap horses crossing a stream." One thing apparent in German policy is that it possesses unity. Having a single head, the kaiser, Germany is not hampered by doubts and difficulties. The Germans go ahead—right or wrong. The kaiser is the sole authority and his word goes.

Great Britain is not troubled by any lack of good men in the midst of its present crisis. If anything it is suffering from a superabundance of men of ability who do not always see eye to eye in the matter of war policy. The British army seems, however, not to have experienced this difficulty so much as has the navy. Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, having had serious differences of opinion with Baron Fisher, first sea lord, the baron resigned his post in indignation and Churchill may have to go in order to "save the face" of the country.

Both men are individuals of strong personality and absolutely intolerant of other people's opinions. It seems a pity that they could not agree in the interests of their country. This is, from a British point of view, perhaps not to be so much lamented. It has given the signal for the reconstruction of the cabinet and the formation of a coalition cabinet made up of leading men of all parties.

It will be remembered that at the outbreak of the Russo-Japanese war in 1905, the first step taken by the statesmen of Japan was to lay aside their political differences and join in a coalition government that worked wonders for the good of that country. That a similar combination would have been the best thing for Britain or any other democratic country from the very beginning of the war has been manifest. France saw the advantage of such a ministry from the first and set about successfully to obtain it. If the British expect to win this war in which their country is lined up definitely against Germany, they have need to work for a certain unity in their government which recent events prove has not existed there.

It is fortunate for the British that they have at their command in a crisis such as this statesmen like Arthur Balfour, Bonar Law, Austen Chamberlain and men who like the Earl of Derby combine the practical, administrative qualities with the foresight and acumen of a statesman of the first order. It is equally fortunate for the British that they can face the marvelous unity and unified national spirit of the Germans with a cabinet made up of the leading men of both parties, assisted by a representative of the labor interests.

It is, as the proverb suggests, foolish to change conditions in a crisis; yet if the change is necessary and inevitable, and the only method of salvation, it is the wisest thing to do it and to get over with it.

One thing appears from the words of Premier Asquith, the British national leader, that whatever changes may be made in the ministry there will be no change in the policy of prosecuting the war to a finish.

GERMAN PATERNALISM

German government is nothing unless paternal. Indeed, it is remarkable how closely the rule of the kaiser comes in many points to the principles advocated by the Socialists. In Berlin the municipality interests itself with the minutiae of daily life and the regulation of many domestic matters which the American citizen would consider entirely his own business.

At the same time it must be confessed that the Germans have profited in many ways by this determined and constant interference with what would, in the United States, be considered "inalienable rights" of the citizens. In Berlin the municipality decrees that there shall be piano playing only between certain hours. It decrees the recording with the police of all changes of address.

Now comes a further interference with the liberty of the subject that, however, would make American feelings boil. The management of the municipal street railway system in Berlin has forbidden the knitting of stockings by passengers while sitting in the street cars.

Berlin conductors have been furnished with copies of this solemn decree and instructed to request ladies who indulge in this diversion, which has always been a favorite street car occupation with a certain class of German women, to desist from their work and kindly "to step outside."

Would anyone believe it? The reason annexed to this sweeping and as some might consider it, grossly offensive ukase, is that there is danger of some unfortunate citizen falling against the knitting female and having his or her eyes put out. It is not stated that during the many years during which German fraus have been pursuing the even tenor of their way knitting their warm socks or woolen garments that there has been any extraordinary epidemic of knitting-needle blindness. On the contrary, the Germans are usually a well-set-up race and remarkably free from physical defects.

It is in the air—this paternalism. It is blown about by the wind. Even in free America we hear the mutter of the distant thunder and see the approach of the storm that is to blow into our homes and compel us to do what we do not want to do. After this recrudescence to ancient Puritanism occurs we may expect to have to give a strict account of everything we do. Whether we will be any happier or otherwise does not at present appear.

It is also almost certain—indeed one might get up quite a reputation as a prophet by prophesying that it will be the case—that after a few years of trial of the new—or old—system of forcing men and women to do what they do not desire to do, there will be a swing of the pendulum in the other direction.

History tells of the effective regulation of morals and manners under Oliver Cromwell in England. It also narrates how when the Protector died all England went mad with a desire to overturn everything he had so carefully built up, and the whole country demanded the return of the Stuarts and a full liberty or license to do what they pleased—and the last state of that land was worse than the first.

Because of his extreme bashfulness he was unable to tell his love in words, consequently he resorted to outlandish methods, such as following her constantly, painting valentines on her back fence, serenading her, etc.

Miss Jones misunderstands the meaning of such actions and believes Mr. Jinks to be an enemy to her peace of mind. She at length took the matter to court, where the matter is fixed up favorable to both Mr. Jinks and Miss Jones, who are happy ever after.

The scene shows the trial between Miss Jones and Mr. Jinks. As the jury and witnesses come in, Mike the court janitor escorts them to their places.

THE BETTER WAY

Who serves his country best? Not he who for a brief and stormy space

Leads forth her armies to the fierce affray.

Short is the time of turmoil and unrest,

Long years of peace succeed it and replace:

There is a better way.

Who serves his country best? Not he who guides her senates in debate

And makes the laws which are her prop and stay;

Not he who wears the poet's purple vest

And sings her songs of love and grief and fate:

There is a better way.

He serves his country best Who joins the tide that lifts her nobly on,

For speech has myriad tongues for every day

And song but one; and law within the breast

Is stronger than the graven law on stone:

This is the better way.

No drop but serves the slowly lifting tide,

No dew but has an errand to some flower;

No smallest star but sheds some helpful ray,

And man by man, each giving to all the rest,

Makes the firm bulwark of the country's power:

There is no better way.

—SUSAN COOLIDGE.

My first wish is to see the whole world at peace and the inhabitants of it as one band of brothers, striving which should contribute most to the happiness of mankind.—George Washington.

I recoil with horror at the ferociousness of men. Will nations never devise a more rational umpire of difference than force? Are there no means of coercing justice more gratifying to our nature than a waste of the blood of thousands and the labor of millions of our fellow creatures?—Thomas Jefferson.

UNIVERSITY TO AID RURAL INSTITUTIONS

The creation of two new fellowships in the college of agriculture which the University expects will be of exceedingly great value to the people of California has been announced. One is a professorship of rural institutions. To this has been called Dr. Elwood Meade, one of the most distinguished irrigation engineers and agricultural statesmen in America. The other is a new professorship of agricultural engineering. To this has been called Dr. Jay Brownlee Davidson of Iowa Agricultural college, a specialist in the testing of agricultural machinery as to its efficiency.

Dr. Elwood Meade is one of America's most distinguished citizens. For many years both in governmental and other positions, he was closely identified with the settlement of the western third of the United States. During that time, people generally learned to respect his judgment and to believe in the correctness of his views with respect to the development of the natural resources of the country.

During the past seven years Dr. Mead has been chairman of the state rivers and water commission of Victoria, Australia. He introduced the so-called closer settlement plan, which has done much to develop that state. Of the 119,000 acres acquired by Victoria for closer settlement in the irrigated areas, 100,000 are now subdivided and 74,000 are settled.

Secretary Lane has appointed Dr. Mead chairman of a central board of review of the committees on revision of reclamation project costs. The several committees are directed by the secretary of the interior to revise the estimated cost of each reclamation project upon which construction charges heretofore announced were based. The reports of the committees are to be referred to Dr. Elwood Mead, Gen. W. L. Marshall and Mr. I. D. O'Donnell for review and report to the secretary.

Dr. Mead's election as professor of rural institutions in the University of California is to correlate the necessary scientific work of the college and experiment station with the human and public aspects of the problem. His work is to include features of rural life outside of farming which are of great importance, but which have thus far been neglected.

Professor Davidson, now elected professor of agricultural engineering, will be stationed at the university farm at Davis. It is proposed to build up there a testing plant for agricultural machinery. Here investigations as to the fundamental reasons for efficiency in farm machines will be made. Agricultural colleges have not heretofore seriously studied this subject. It is believed that the university farm, with its land on which it is possible to use machinery practically throughout the year, offers opportunities not possessed by other agricultural colleges.

Professor Davidson graduated from the University of Nebraska in 1904. There he was later instructor in farm mechanics. He was employed in the experimental department of Deere & Co. and afterwards by the International Harvester company. For the past ten years he has been in charge of agricultural engineering in Iowa state college.

Professor Davidson is the joint author with Professor L. W. Chase of "Farm Machinery," a text used generally throughout the United States, and he is the author of a text-book for secondary schools entitled "Agricultural Engineering." He is also the author of several bulletins, including "Modern Silo Construction," "Creamery Organization and Construction," and "The Relative Value of Alcohol and Gasoline for Fuel and Light." Professor Davidson has designed several pieces of agricultural engineering apparatus, including the Iowa integrating traction dynamometer.

Let us thank God that we live in an age when something has influence besides the bayonet.—Daniel Webster.

JUST LIKE JOHNNY

"Now, boys, what is the axis of the earth?"

"The axis of the earth," said Johnny, "is an imaginary line which passes from one pole to another and on it the earth revolves."

"Very good, Johnny," said the teacher. "Could you hang clothes on that line?"

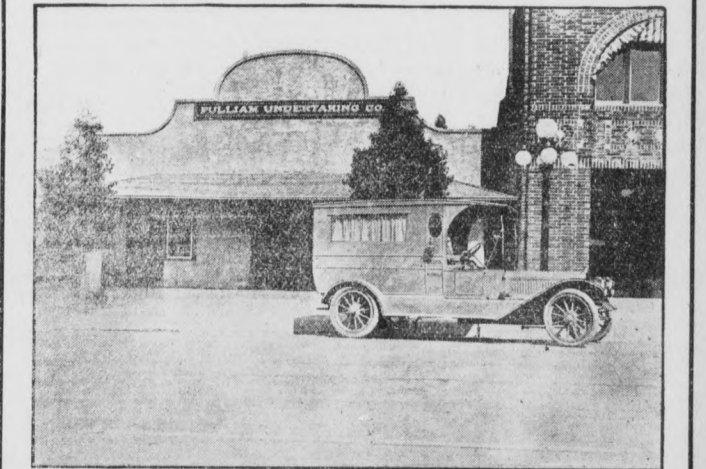

"Yes sir."

"Oh, indeed; what sort of clothes may I ask?"

"Imaginary clothes, sir."

THIRTY-NINE STATES COMMERCIALLY INTERESTED IN PEACHES

In at least thirty-nine of our forty-eight states there are peach interests of commercial importance, according to a new Farmer's Bulletin (No. 631) of the department on "Growing Peaches." This bulletin is the first of three on the general subject of peach growing, which will treat of fundamental orchard operations. The questions of site, propagation, planting, tillage and soil fertility are treated in the first bulletin now being issued.

In locating a peach as well as any other orchard other advantages must be considered besides the natural ones of climate and soil. If an orchard is too remote from a shipping station, too far away from a suitable market, or located where ice for refrigerator cars cannot be conveniently supplied, it may not be possible to grow peaches there profitably.

Peaches may do well on a wide range of soil types, including even some of the moderately heavy clay loams and clays. But whatever the type, a soil must be thoroughly well drained to be suitable for peaches. They will not succeed on poorly drained soils. It follows that the heavy clay types which are so hard and impervious that water does not percolate through them readily are to be avoided as a rule. Moreover, a soil should be moderately fertile. One very rich in nitrogen is not to be desired as a general rule, since it is likely to induce an excessive growing of foliage. On the other hand, the impression which is somewhat common that a poor, unfertile soil is "good enough for peaches" is erroneous.

In districts in which alkali soils occur, sites should be selected with a view to avoiding them. While the peach tree can be grown where there is a limited amount of the alkali salts, they cause disaster if present in large quantities. It is safer, therefore, to avoid them as far as possible.

As a general proposition, a site that is elevated considerably above the surrounding area is to be preferred for a peach orchard. Relative elevation is generally of greater importance than actual elevation above sea level.

It is a well recognized fact, though one too often overlooked in selecting sites for orchards, that cold air settles to the lower levels. For this reason it is often colder at the lower elevations than it is at higher points in the same locality. This is what is meant by "atmospheric drainage." The occurrence of frost in low places when there is none on elevated areas is thus explained. For the same reason peach buds are often winter-killed or the blossoms are injured by frost in the spring in low places when near-by orchards on higher elevations are injured much less, or even escape entirely.

Where an orchard occupies a site that is adjacent to a large body of water, the importance of a relatively high elevation largely disappears. To be a factor in the matter, however, a body of water must be of sufficient size and depth to have an appreciable influence on the local climate. Because the water warms up in the spring more slowly than the atmosphere, it acts in effect as a refrigerator, making the temperature in its immediate vicinity colder than it is at points somewhat distant from it. For this reason, vegetation within the zone of this influence advances more slowly in the spring than it does outside of that zone. The tendency is for the blossoming of peach trees situated within the zone to be delayed until after the season of spring frosts is past.

In the fall frosts are delayed in a similar manner, except that the large body of water, having absorbed much heat during the summer, cools off in the fall more slowly than the atmosphere, and hence it tends to keep the temperature within its zone of influence warmer than it would otherwise be.

It is because of these reasons that peaches are grown with marked success and injury to the crops by adverse temperature conditions is comparatively infrequent in the portions of New York and the Province of Ontario that border Lake Ontario; in Ohio along Lake Erie; in southwestern Michigan on Lake Michigan, and in some other districts which are adjacent to large bodies of water. As a rule, the zone of influence of bodies of water, such as those named, is rather narrow, usually not extending back from the shore more than a few miles.

The slope or exposure of a site is the point of the compass toward which the land inclines. A question very commonly asked is, "What slope is best?" It is one that admits of no direct answer. No one slope is preferable under all conditions and in all regions. In fact, the influence which a particular exposure may have in the success of an orchard is probably much overemphasized in the popular mind.

As a rule, it is doubtless safe to assume that a site having a moderate slope in some direction is to be preferred for orchard purposes, other things being equal, to one that is level. One having a slope will usually have better soil and atmospheric drainage than a level area.

All wars are follies, very expensive and very mischievous ones. In my opinion there never was a good war or a bad peace. When will mankind be convinced and agree to settle their difficulties by arbitration?—Benjamin Franklin in 1783.

GLENDALE STILL IN RACE

The oratorical championship of Southern California will be settled at South Pasadena on Friday, May 28. Mr. Carlos Alvear of Pasadena high will speak on "Philippine Independence." Purman Bennett of Glendale high will speak on "Peace and Our Foreign Policy." Lincoln high school, Los Angeles, will be represented by Miss Selma Brown, who will speak on "Colonel Goethals, the Canal Builder," while Los Angeles high school will be represented by Mr. Morris Ankrum, who speaks on "Socialism."

The first two speakers were the two best of the Interurban League, in which Alvear defeated Bennett by a very narrow margin. The second two are the city representatives. The school that wins this final championship contest will hold the beautiful silver trophy cup presented by the University of California and which was won last year by Long Beach. Long Beach was eliminated in the recent contest at Glendale. Glendale has excellent hopes in Bennett, who is working hard to outdo his effort in Glendale last week.
